SIR OSWALD MOSLEY HOPES TO BE FASCIST HEAD IN TWO YEARS

Wonderful Progress Has Been Made in Past 18 Months

NEED TWO YEARS MORE

Hopes To Be Head of The Movement in Great Britain

(Note: Sir Oswald Mosley, now thirty-seven, hopes to become the Fascist head of the British Government before he is forty, writes H. R. Knickerbocker in the second article of his series of the British Blackshirts.)

"Give us two years more of preparation and if we continue to grow as we have in the past eighteen months we will win in 1936," the British Fascist leader tells Knickerbocker.)

LONDON, Apr. 24.—(INS)—Mussolini receives in the most magnificent room of the most magnificent palace in Rome, the Palazzo Venezia. Hitler receives in the bright, modern, luxurious room of the Reich's Chancellery in Berlin.

Sir Oswald Mosley, candidate to be the Mussolini or the Hitler of Britain, receives in the most primitive room of the cold, monastic building they call the Black House in London. Mussolini and Hitler too had primitive quarters in their early days but none could have been less pretentious than those of the man whom his enemies call "a film actor," but whom his followers hail as the savior of England.

Twenty years ago, lacking two months of being eighteen, Mosley flew over the German lines. Later he crashed and today his right leg is two inches shorter than his left leg. But he came forward to greet his visitors without a limp. Despite his injury he became runner-up in the British fencing championship, second best fencer in Britain.

Airmen play a great role in European Fascism. Balbo in Italy, Goering in Germany, and now Mosley in Britain have taken the lead.

"Yes, air-fighting is Fascist," exclaimed Sir Oswald.

He sat at a rickety desk. Two plain chairs were in front of it. A tiny fire burned in an open hearth, but its heat made no impression on the great bare room, with a door-window wide open at Sir Oswald's back. I had to keep my overcoat on but the chill of London's early spring seemed to make no impression on Sir Oswald, clad only in the black jersey, black trousers of his movement.

Looking down upon us was a big portrait of Mussolini, close friend of Sir Oswald.

Next to the portrait hung a fascis. In another room hung a standard presented by Mussolini inscribed "British Union of Fascists, for King, Empire and International Justice." The orientation of Sir Oswald's movement is definitely pro-Italian and only to a smaller degree pro-Hitler.

"The classic man," observed Sir Oswald, indicating the Mussolini portrait. He spoke with a boyish enthusiasm. His figure, robust but youthful, was tall his complexion dark, his hair brushed back smoothly, his moustache black. "That poise," he continued, "that Mussolini has. It is the poise of the men of classic times."

Sir Oswald's own profile might well be Italian, with its prominent nose, clear line. His enemies have derisively called him the best-looking politician in England. He may remember that critics of Adolf Hitler derisively called him "Der Schoener Adolf."

He is a sportsman. On the walls hung fencing foils.

"Mussolini too is a fencer," he remarked. "I've never fenced with him but they say he is good. I used to wrestle also. But now I've given up championship bouts. They were too strenuous."

Of the Fascist leaders of Europe Mosley is the only one of noble birth. He is the sixth baronet, or hereditary knight. His baronetcy was created in 1781. One of his ancestors was the living originator and model of the John Bull who represented England as Uncle Sam represents America.

He was educated at the fashionable public school, Winchester, and, intending to become a professional soldier, became a cadet at Sandhurst, the British West Point. As an officer of the Sixteenth Lancers he entered the war, switched to the Royal Air Force, was invalided out in 1916 after the injury to his leg failed to heal, and in 1918, aged twenty-two, entered politics as member of parliament for the Tory party.

The youngest aristocrat, steadily winning recognition by his gifts of oratory, gradually went Left. He rose as independent in 1922. His rise was meteoric. By 1929, aged thirty-three, he had become a member of the

REED ADVISES STUDENTS TO ENTER INTO POLITICS

Senator Denies the Statement That Politicians Are All Crooks

"READ NEWSPAPERS"

By David A. Reed

Last Friday I spoke to students of Westminster College at New Wilmington, and I advised them to get into politics. I told them it is not true that politicians are all crooks. I said that politics suffers more from stupidity than anything else. The trouble is that men and women do not give enough thought to governmental affairs. They are too willing to take a chance. And so men slip into public office who have no business there.

I told the Westminster students to read their newspapers religiously. And that is my suggestion to all the people of Pennsylvania. The papers are a running history of the United States, and in them you will find the tale of the professors and the medicine men who are trying to shunt this country into lanes against which warnings were issued over a century ago by George Washington and Thomas Jefferson.

The panacea of the professors and the experiments of the old Federal Farm board, the present Agricultural Adjustment Administration and similar agencies have done the farmer more harm than good. Government cannot do everything for the citizen. The Government should not intrude more than is absolutely necessary in our lives and business affairs. I think the N. R. A. has raised the morale of the country. It deserves praise for having tended to abolish child labor in the South and sweatshops in the North. But the bill of rights as written into our constitution cost human lives, and we must not allow those rights to be whittled away.

In time of war the Government calls upon Pennsylvania for a tenth of everything—a tenth of the men, and a tenth of the money. But in times of peace the head-men forget what they owe this state. Just now the present program of the Government is calculated to assist the South's cotton growers, and the grain and livestock producers of the middle West. This is being done at the expense of the East. And Pennsylvania farmers are finding that the prices of things they buy are rising faster than the prices of things they sell.

Billions of dollars spent unwisely in the name of farm relief have directly injured the producer by impairing confidence in the government and causing a falling off in employment and purchasing power, without in any way helping the Pennsylvania farmer. Why delude ourselves by saying that the contrary is true?

Has N. R. A. benefitted the small business man? Ask him. He will tell you that costs have been increasing steadily, and his income has dwindled. Giant industries have been able to codify themselves and establish prices. But the little fellow hasn't been so fortunate. He has been "taking it on the chin" for over a year, and is expected to like it.

I go still farther, and ask how N. R. A. or any other of the alphabetical agencies has bettered the condition of the great majority of Americans? What lasting good are we getting from the expenditure of billions of dollars for irrigation projects and bounties to hog and cotton raisers? What are the processing taxes but added weight for the farmer? Down in Washington they are running up bills with no thought of the day of payment, and they are establishing a deficit of such proportions that children yet unborn face an unbelievable burden.

BUCKS COUNTY COUNCIL, PARENT-TEACHER ASS'N

Advancement of Welfare of Children is Its Main Endeavor

20 AFFILIATED ASS'NS

Tenth Assembly Held This Spring; New Hope Woman Is President

A staff reporter of the Courier has interviewed officials of the Bucks County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, and in the following article tells about this organization, something of its aims, and its method of operation:

With advancement of the welfare of the child as its primary phase of endeavor, the Bucks County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations has a gigantic task assigned to it. With 20 affiliated Parent-Teacher Associations within the borders of the county, Bucks County public school children might count themselves most fortunate in having such excellent guardians of their health and general welfare.

The 20 P. T. As. include many more schools than that number, inasmuch as some districts where such are formed have several schools. Thus are thousands of students watched over.

The Parent-Teacher Associations which are affiliated with the county council are: Andalusia, Cornwells Heights, Edison, Falls Township, Warwick, Mill Creek, Morrisville, Hulmeville, South Langhorne, Trevoise and Penn Valley, Warrington, New Britain Borough, New Britain Township, New Hope, Newtown, Prospect Hill, Ridge Valley, Lower Southampton, Solebury, Warminster.

The tenth assembly of the county council took place this Spring, and during its years of existence the council has many accomplishments to its credit. This year the council associations plan to further parent education and Summer roundup work particularly. The former phase of activity takes the form of a study group in the various localities desiring such. A chairman volunteers services or is appointed by the local president, and the said chairman takes the initiative in outlining the study course. There are about six such study groups in Bucks County. The number of weeks or months through which such studies continue depend upon the subject and the group involved. Correspondence courses, material secured from the national organization, may be used in this work, the material being distributed through the study group after formation of such. Educational subjects for both parents and teachers are frequently taken up at the association's monthly meetings.

The Summer Roundup has proved very popular and directly benefits the child. The Summer Roundup chairman in each association, together with his or her assistants lists during the summer all children who will enter school in the Fall. A clinic is arranged for with physicians and nurses examining the boys and girls at a specified time. Defects are noted, and

SEARCH FOR DILLINGER SHIFTS TO MILWAUKEE

Motormen Report Four Seen In Car With Guns and Pistols; Speed Away

WAGE A GREAT HUNT

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Apr. 24.—Search for John Dillinger and three members of his gang suddenly shifted to Milwaukee in Waukesha county today when police received a report that four men all heavily armed, sped westward through Milwaukee in a large touring car.

Shortly after 8 a. m. police were notified by Richard Beckwith and John Miller, electric company motormen, that the "mystery" automobile containing the four men dashed westward in front of their street car as they turned into the car barn. Beside the driver, alone in the front seat, was a sawed-off shot gun or a machine gun. Beckwith told police. Three men were in the rear seat. On the lap of the man in the center was a machine gun or shot gun, each of the other two men held a pistol. Beckwith said. The car, he informed police, was going about 60 miles an hour.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Apr. 24.—John Dillinger and his band of outlaw killers having eluded capture in two gun battles with authorities, today were still being sought by a large band of police authorities in a search extending from the forest lakeland of northern Wisconsin to central Minnesota. Eight hundred law enforcing officers, numbering among them two dozen Department of Justice operatives, were waging one of the greatest man hunts this territory has ever known. All were under orders to "shoot first should Dillinger and his followers be encountered."

REFUSE TROTSKY'S RETURN

(Copyright, 1934, by I. N. S.)

Paris, France, Apr. 24.—Approached diplomatically by France, Soviet Russia has refused to allow the return of Leon Trotsky. International News Service learned today. France desired to get rid of the famous exiled Bolshevik leader as soon as possible and broached the question of his return to Russia as a possible solution of its problem. It was learned, but whether or not Trotsky is willing to patch his end up with Dictator Josef Stalin, the present Soviet regime will not have him back, France was told. Answering a call from the French foreign office, Chancellor Rosenberg of the Soviet Embassy called upon Foreign Minister Louis Barthou before he left Paris for Warsaw and at this meeting the question was taken up diplomatically. Moscow's refusal to harbor Trotsky followed. Italy today appeared to be the only possible refuge for Trotsky, all other countries approached having flatly said they would not have him.

DISCARD AVIATION PLAN

Washington, D. C., Apr. 24.—The Administration's plan to place $10,000,000 in President Roosevelt's hands for an army airplane factory and for other aviation purposes, was discarded today as the result of one of the strangest chapters of congressional history. The appropriation was eliminated from the $316,000,000 army supply bill in a conference between the Senate and House. The bill now goes to the White House. Presumably, the President approved of abandonment of the factory plan. During the proceedings in Congress no official explanation was given nor was the $10,000,000 fund challenged in either branch.

FOUR ARABS CONFESS

Bagdad, Apr. 24.—Four Arabs who confessed the murder of Ray Fisher, American traveler and his German companion several months ago, today were sentenced to death. Fisher and the German were shot, the Arabs confessed at the brief trial which started yesterday, while canoeing down the Euphrates River because the Arabs had been told they had bags in their canoe "containing much money." The German was shot while bending over the canoe and Fisher was killed when he came to his companion's aid.

PARKLAND BABY DIES AFTER EATING POISON

William S. Walmsley, Jr., 2, Eats Tablets Given To Mother for Medicine

DIES IN TWO HOURS

PARKLAND, Apr. 24.—Discovering that her two-year old son had eaten medicinal tablets containing strychnine, a Parkland mother, frantically rushed the baby to the office of a physician where a futile effort was made to have him live.

The tragedy occurring yesterday took the life of little William S. Walmsley, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Walmsley, of Parkland.

The medicine, containing strychnine, had been placed by the mother in her pocketbook. Upon entering the room where the child was, she found the little boy in possession of the pocketbook, and discovered he had apparently eaten about 10 of the tablets.

An antidote was administered at the office of Dr. G. McMull, Langhorne, but to no avail. Death occurred at the child's home two hours later.

In addition to the parents one small sister survives.

The funeral on Thursday at 1:30 will be held at the funeral home of R. L. Horner, Langhorne, with burial in Mt. Peace Cemetery, Philadelphia.

NO, THANKS

Uncle Sam will appreciate the compliment but he will have to refuse the proffered task of world policeman.

The offer comes in the form of a suggestion from Pierre de Lanux, retiring director of the Paris office of the League of Nations. It was made in an address at a luncheon of the League of Nations association in Paris. The speaker proposed that the United States declare a policy applicable to Europe similar to the Monroe doctrine.

"For the present," he said, "what could give a powerful help to the prevention of war, and yet might be obtained of American opinion in its present mood, is probably some declaration of policy similar to the Monroe doctrine, by which the United States would simply tell the world that 'any act of war in violation of existing pledges to which we are a party would be regarded by us as an unfriendly act.'"

The United States is finding enough to do on this side of the Atlantic to keep its hands busy. For the present, at least, it is willing to let Europe to do its own police work, a job entrusted to the League of Nations but which appears to have fallen down on the task.

ONWARD

History is thought to repeat itself and life is said by the profound to move in cycles, but invention rushes onward never to return to yesterday's antiquated methods.

Every day production records in many industries are beaten through improved methods and the inventive genius of engineers. The work of housewives is being daily diminished by the never ceasing efforts of the inventor and the trained mechanic.

On the farm a twelve-months' job for human hands has been reduced to as little as 60 days toil for machinery that never tires but the next generation will wonder how the farmers of 1928 got along with the "antiquated machinery" available to them.

The press which prints your daily newspaper is capable of printing and folding more papers each minute than the press of old could produce in a 12-hour working day. Inventive progress gives you your news today in less than an hour after it happens.

ONE MORE

Who knows what the USIS is? Well, any curiosity on the point may be satisfied by turning to that informative and humorous journal, the Congressional Record. Senator Hastings of Delaware is speaking: "My understanding is that a new bureau has just been created for the purpose of making a study of the new bureaus and their respective purposes. This bureau is to be known as 'USIS,' the United States information service."

That it will have plenty of work to do must be evident to any follower of the New Deal and its functioning machinery.

The eminent Vienna dermatologists who get gratifying results with yeast would know what to suggest for a thin-skinned chancellor.

No wonder the world suffers. It takes a tough guy to get well if he is taking the medicine of 17 doctors.

In case of a United States of Europe, the Balkans will, of course, be Band 20 in Chicago.

Sir Oswald Mosley Hopes To Be Fascist Head in 2 Years

Cabinet in the Labor Government. A brilliant marriage with Lady Cynthia, daughter of the late Marquis Curzon, of Kedleston and his wife, the daughter of Levi Leiter, millionaire Chicagoan, added to the talk that Mosley was a coming prime minister. They had two sons and a daughter. Lady Mosley died in 1933.

In the midst of his first cabinet job Mosley broke with labor, suddenly, spectacularly resigning from the Government because it would not accept his plans for dealing with the unemployed. Banking on his personal prestige he founded the so-called new party. Without proper preparation, lacking sufficient financial backing, the new party collapsed. It failed to get a single seat in the elections of 1931. Its enemies had called it Fascist. Mosley, reflecting on the defeat, analyzed his political ideas, found they were Fascist, and decided to take the risky step of adopting Fascism outright. He founded the British Union of Fascists, and therewith he burned the bridges of "respectable" politics behind him.

It is hardly likely that Sir Oswald could stage another comeback if he should fail at Fascism. The tom-tom beating of the Rothemere Press for his cause is balanced by an equally vigorous daily blast of criticism from the organs of the old established parties. The labor press holds him up to proletarian ridicule. The conservatives crack dignified jokes at his expense. They all declare that Britain has no stomach for Blackshirts and stiff-arm greetings.

But Sir Oswald believes Britain will learn to like them. "The British crowd," he declared, "is capable of displaying great temperance. I have heard many speeches before Latin crowds, but I have seen greater displays of feeling from British crowds than from any Latin crowd."

"That is one element in British psychology that our opponents overlook. They seem to believe that the British have no romanticism in them. They have a great deal of it. They like parades, and uniforms and flags and music."

"That is no accident that the Fascist leaders who have succeeded have all been men who have had experience of the Socialist movement and acquaintance with the masses. Fascist leaders know mass psychology. At Socialist meetings I have stood and watched 100,000 workmen march past with flags and banners and all the uniforms they could scrape together, or anything that would pass for a uniform. They like that, as everybody does, and it is a mistake to believe that the romance of Fascism will not appeal to the British mind."

"Look at Cromwell," he exclaimed. "What could have been more alien to the so-called British point of view than his Ironsides. Fascism combines the romantic quality of the Ironsides with their dour determination to win."

"But when do you expect to win, Sir Oswald?" I asked. "How soon will it be before you intend to fight an election?"

It must be remembered that the Mosley plan, avowed in all his speeches, is to capture control of the government of England by strictly legal means. In this respect he has taken a leaf from Hitler's experience. Early in Mosley's Fascist party councils the question was debated whether it would not be better to put the headquarters, the Black House, or the movement in a city in northern England, or the midlands, in the heart of the sector of greatest industrial unemployment. If this had been done, it was argued, after the blackshirts had accumulated masses of jobless followers they could stage a march on London, a la Mussolini's march on Rome.

Mosley decided against this plan. His whole strategy is now directed toward building up a party organization, not to seize power by violence, but to win it by granting a majority of votes. To see his movement in proper perspective it is necessary to keep in mind that despite whatever promise it may hold for the future, at present it has no seat in parliament and at the moment is not yet strong enough to fight an election.

But Sir Oswald is confident. "If the next election comes in two years, at the expiration of the present parliament, we should be able to fight that election throughout England. We do not intend to make a campaign until we have hopes of winning a majority."

really. A girl would look far to find the like of him. Instinctively she had been sensible of this. Pity, in a way, that she should be doomed to pay so dear for the experience.

A thoughtful but appreciative glance strayed her way and lingered on the vision of vital charm that she was, a young thing all alive in that drab cluster of middle-aged males, full-faced and heavy of wit and gesture—the very type and symbol of her time, lined in hues of soft fire upon the background of dingy dusks. As vivid in her way as the pool of green blaze that the Seven Emeralds of St. Stephen made where their shagreened case lay open beneath a hooded lamp upon a table.

A Customs appraiser finished just then doing a sum with a pencil and looked up to render the verdict, announcing a duty on the stones that made Maurice—when he had mentally translated it into francs—gasp.

It was otherwise with Fenno. She gave a short light laugh, in which Maurice heard a private comment on the high cost of Mumma's caprices, and looked expectantly to the secretary whom her father had sent to meet her. A man little on the hither side of middle-age, in whose face mildly misanthropic eyes were at odds with a modest and amiable spirit, this one wore a wistful grin as he took from his wallet a sheaf of Treasury notes, and after moistening a thumb at his mouth, proceeded composedly to count them down upon the table.

A Customs man verified the count; a colleague gave a receipt: Fenno shut up the shagreened case and replaced it in the overnight bag which was all the luggage she had carried on the mail-plane. There were bows all round and polite verbal expressions; the group disintegrated; and the girl beckoned Maurice with a smile.

"And now?" he asked, moving to her side.

Now we go home. I mean, I'll go home, and then the car can take you on to your hotel. "I'm sorry, Miss Crozier," she secretary interposed, "but it isn't a car; it's only a cab. All the cars are at Southampton, except the one your father has been using—on such short notice, you understand, there wasn't time to get one in."

"That's all right. I only hope it's a decent taxi, not one of those rattleback affairs the streets are full of, Mr. Fowler."

"I'm afraid this isn't quite the last cry in cabs," Fowler confessed with a smear of apology in his smile; "but I hadn't anything to do with its selection. The safe-deposit people supplied it—insisted on being permitted to pick out a dependable driver—and sent it along with this young man, whose duty it is to see that nothing happens to the emeralds before the vaults are open to receive them tomorrow morning."

The secretary, as he spoke, handed Fenno's bag to the person in question, a sturdy fellow with a jutting under-jaw and hard eyes alert in the shadow of a peaked cap. His dark blue tunic carried a gold-embroidered legend, GOTHAM SAFE-DEPOSIT CO., and was strapped by a Sam Browne belt from which a holstered pistol hung. Dark blue riding breeches and black puttees finished off a costume that was, in Maurice's sight, quite doggy.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS!

This week marks the birthday of the first American newspaper

JOHN CAMPBELL, colonial postmaster of Boston, certainly set a good example in the liberal use of the mails.

Campbell corresponded regularly with all the Colonial Governors of New England, keeping them posted on Boston news. So regular and voluminous was this correspondence that Campbell's letters finally emerged in the form of a printed pamphlet called "The Boston News Letter." And this was the first regularly and continuously published newspaper in America, appearing weekly from the last week in April, 1704, to the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The newspaper carried advertisements . . . from its very first issue! And this advertising, telling the reader where to obtain the goods that he sought for his home or his farm or his business, lifted the mere friendly chronicle of village affairs into the realm of a service to the community. The newsletters, plus advertising, became a helpful, informative, and educational institution.

Today, as in 1704, and all the years between, the advertisements are your guide-posts to honest, dependable merchandise at a fair price.

suggestions made to the parents as to proper method of procedure in order that the children might enter school in the best of health. A check is also made in September to learn what corrections have been made. Certificates are awarded each organization doing follow-up work and handing report in for return to the National Council of Parents and Teachers. Splendid cooperation has been given by local doctors and nurses in all communities where this work is done. The number of days on which a clinic is held depend upon the demand in the community.

The Bucks County Council is affiliated with the Pennsylvania Congress of Parents and Teachers, and likewise with the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

With the recurrence of the anniversary of Founder's Day each year a celebration is usually held by each local organization. At this time the association makes a financial donation to the state organization for propagation of the work. The county association is maintained by membership dues of the local units. All county officials give freely of their services.

The County Council conducts two meetings a year, one in the Spring, and another in the Fall, meeting with whatever associations extend an invitation.

Officers of the County Council are: President, Mrs. John A. Flood, New Hope; vice presidents—first, Mrs. Ralph M. Fox, Morrisville; second, Albert Rutter, Perkaskie; third, Benjamin Zeitlin, Ottsville; fourth, Mrs.

Irvin MacNair, Chalfont; recording secretary, Mrs. LeRoy Nixon, Newtown; treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Lamb, Treviso.

R. Gottlieb, New Hope.

Delegates are sent to the state congress conference each year, the president of the county council usually being a delegate. The individual associations likewise send delegates as a rule. These conferences are held biennially, in October. Next October the workers will convene in Scranton. When Bucks County parents and teachers meet in the Fall the program usually takes the form of a school of instruction, or an institute. The approximate attendance at the county meetings is 125.

The County Council also has an executive board which is composed of the officers, committee chairmen, and three members-at-large. At present, J. Harry Hoffman is one of the members-at-large, with two more soon to be chosen.

Youth Week Diamond Battles Get Under Way

Backed by the heavy slugging of "Fatty" Fiorello, "Tony" Rotundo had little trouble in downing the First Ward, 11-4, on Sullivan's field. Fiorello made four hits, drove in three tallies and scored three himself. This game was completed in one hour and ten minutes, showing that the youngsters hustled throughout.

"Judy" Allen, colored ace hurler for the First Warders, was driven from the mound in the third inning and replaced by "Sammy" Kervick, whose fast ball was too much for the Second Ward team.

Too many passes spoiled the game at Croydon where the Third Ward triumphed by the score of 19-11. This was a typical boys' game.

Weak hitting was the downfall of the Fourth Ward boys as the Fifth Ward, with "Bill" Buck and "Mike" Castanino dividing the pitching, scored a victory, 10-4.

He's Never Wrong

By BURNLEY

Bill KLEM-

FAMOUS UMPIRE—THE MAN WHO HAS NEVER CALLED ONE WRONG!

THE GRAND OLD MAN OF UMPIRING, HE IS NOW IN HIS 30TH SEASON AS AN "UMP" AND HAS CALLED 'EM IN MORE THAN 5000 GAMES—

WILLIAM JOSEPH KLEM, who has umpired more than 5,000 games and who is now in his thirtieth season as an arbiter, is one of the most interesting characters in the diamond pastime.

Klem became famous as the man whose boast is that "he has never called one wrong." You can't get Old Will to admit that he was even slightly incorrect in any of his countless decisions as a caller of balls and strikes.

Whatever the justice of Bill's claim to absolute correctness as an arbiter, the fact remains that what he says goes, right or wrong.

In the old days, when the national pastime was a rough and ready game, many of the so-called tough guys of baseball tried to heckle Mister Klem on his decisions, but it is a matter of record for all to see that Mister Klem was always the winner of the argument.

While there is much truth in the idea that arguing with the umpire never got anybody any place, in former times a baseball arbiter had to be a pretty courageous person.

Notorious umpire-baiters like Johnny Evers and the late John McGraw never got to first base with Klem.

Bill is past sixty, but he hasn't the slightest intention of retiring.

He really loves his work, and he finds it difficult to understand why more young men do not take up umpiring as a profession. According to Klem, the work of a baseball arbiter is comparatively easy, the hours are short, the pay is excellent and an umpire's years of service are long.

Klem's choice of the greatest player of all time is the incomparable "Matty," his second choice being Babe Ruth.

One more thing. Never call Mister Klem "Catfish." He resents it very strongly, and when Mister Klem resents something, he does it in a big way.
